How to Siphon Private Funds

The tension between those who believe in changing the system from the inside and those who believe this is impossible, but we need to create an entirely new system, is a well-worn debate. However, moving beyond binaries—or rather seeing the mirage of a binary for what it is—forces us to work in the space where both can already happening at once (and both may be necessary). Siphoning, and redistributing private wealth is one proposed ambition that requires no overcoming some expense. If government funding is highly competitive, forces people to reproduce their own disenfranchisement, and prioritises projects that are palatable to the rich—but what if we take back some funds—most quickly possible, and scale-out? Here is the list of ideas.

1

Get paid for the work you do, and the time you put into mobilising

- Can YOU get paid for your time?
- Can you get paid for your labour?

2

Ask the rich to pay their fair share

- Can you ask for donations?
- Can you ask for a subscription?

3

Fiddle Funds

- Can you fiddle funds from existing budgets?
- Can you fiddle funds from your employer?

4

Fiddle Funds

- Can you fiddle funds from existing budgets?
- Can you fiddle funds from your employer?

5

Fiddle Funds

- Can you fiddle funds from existing budgets?
- Can you fiddle funds from your employer?

6

Fiddle Funds

- Can you fiddle funds from existing budgets?
- Can you fiddle funds from your employer?

7

Ask the rich to pay their fair share

- Can you ask for donations?
- Can you ask for a subscription?

Note

If we struggle in

Profit and unpaid labour of some sort. The [illegible] system and you get paid for this labour, but not for [illegible] labour. Whatever this is, it's [illegible] being practiced should pay back, sometimes it seems like staying in to unpaid labour asked of you by your employer. Sometimes it means validating labour that increases social, environmental, or communal values, for relationships. To this end, this area we subtracting from profit and wealth, not attempting to emulate it.

we must also build sustainable models that fund ourselves.

Resources

Redistribution can come in the form of...

- Recruit an 'Over Earner's Guilt' in your network
- Start taking whole-organisation or community (we-self 'us-is-that-society') quarterly, or a bit of a break now for the Underground Pool Trade is a given.
- Try this charitable tarot theory from me as facilitator.

Questions

What funding is out there for us organising or resisting areas where your labour might be undervalued? How might this be taken forward?

Is this practice something you could or would want to make explicit and to whom. Internally or externally?

Note

you may be ?

when number of harms or [illegible] costs, namely [illegible] are being underpinned by a set of [illegible] assumptions about [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and